16 DONOR LISTING

PRESIDENT, OLIN COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

Gilda Barabino, PhD

Dear Olin supporters,

It is my pleasure to share this year's donor impact report with you.

Contained within these pages are the inspiring stories of our community members and valued friends who helped propel the College forward over the past year.

I would especially like to draw your attention to page 4, the story of a transformative gift to the Olin Fund from alum Nate Smith '07 and his spouse. It is my hope that you will join them this fall as they challenge Olin supporters in raising, and then matching, $100,000 for the Olin Fund.

Your belief in Olin, your volunteerism and your philanthropic contributions continue to make an Olin engineering education possible for our talented students, and allow our faculty and staff to mentor our Oliners through their undergraduate years and beyond.

You—our parents, alumni, students, trustees, corporate and foundation partners, and friends—make Olin possible.

With gratitude,

Gilda Barabino

Olin College Announces $100,000 Matching Campaign

Olin College is thrilled to announce an inspiring fundraising initiative that promises to make a significant difference for our community and the next generation of innovative engineers. Nate Smith (Class of 2007) and his husband, Chris Cheng, have graciously pledged to match donations made to the Olin Fund up to $100,000 through December 2023.

A Dollar-for-Dollar Promise

Their pledge will match both 1) gifts from new Olin Fund donors and 2) increased gifts from returning Olin Fund donors to the Olin Fund between now and December 31.

These gifts, whether $10 or $10,000, will be matched dollar-for-dollar, effectively doubling the impact of each donation. Donors now have a unique and impactful opportunity to leverage their generosity and directly support Olin's mission.

"This gift is about making an impact," says Nate. "We want to encourage others to think of Olin and the impact it's had on their lives and to give back to the college what they can."

Why the Olin Fund?

"When I think about philanthropy, I think about impact," says Nate. "Lots of organizations are trying to do the same things—some stand out as more unique than others. Olin continues to be a unique organization in its mission and impact."

On their generosity, Nate Smith remarked, "Olin gave me the tools and the mindset to approach the world with curiosity and determination. Chris and I believe in the power of education and the difference Olin makes."

Nate is a member of Olin's second-ever graduating class. When choosing a college, he considered how one's college friends form a lifelong network. "I was set on attending Olin at Candidate's Weekend. I met all the faculty, staff and students, and I remember thinking, 'I really like these people. I would be lucky for them to be my lifelong friends.'"

A graduate of UCLA and Middlebury College, Chris describes himself as an "honorary Oliner" who has become close friends with many Olin graduates. "As college students, you tend to think more about taking what the university has to offer. Later in life, it is important to reflect on how you can give back," says Chris.

Fueling Olin's Future

The funds raised through this matching campaign will be instrumental in supporting Olin's various endeavors—from enhancing need-based financial aid, academic programs, research opportunities and student initiatives, to advancing infrastructure and technology on campus. Olin College has always been at the forefront of pioneering engineering education, and contributions from its community and alumni ensure that it remains a beacon of innovation.

"Oliners have a certain idealism," explains Nate. "They want to do things better and change the world in a practical way that I believe in. This gift to Olin is my small part in creating that experience for other people."

How to Contribute

Making a donation is simple. Visit www.olin.edu/donate or get in touch with Emily Cavalier, director of the Olin Fund, for more details. Every contribution, no matter its size, makes a profound difference.

Remember, every dollar counts, and thanks to Nate and Chris, each dollar is now worth two. Whether you're a first-time donor or a regular donor, now is the perfect moment to amplify your impact. ●

TRUSTEE GIVING

Jeannie Diefenderfer

“I am a direct beneficiary of someone’s generosity. It matters to me.”

→ When Olin Trustee Jeannie Diefenderfer was on campus in May, a casual conversation over coffee changed the trajectory of sophomore Brooklyn Wakefield’s summer.

Diefenderfer learned about Brooklyn’s opportunity to travel to Japan for a summer internship at Mitsubishi Robotics. However, as a first-generation college student, Brooklyn did not have the resources to make the trip overseas. Diefenderfer knew she had to act quickly so that Brooklyn did not lose this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

“Sometimes people who have never experienced that kind of hardship don’t understand the impact of time.

Because I benefitted from similar generosity as a college student, it was very important to me to act quickly for her and make the decision” to fund the internship. “It’s crucial to meet the need where the need exists—not according to the giver’s needs.”

“Being the beneficiary gave me conviction to pay it forward.”

Jeannie immigrated to the U.S. with her family when she was 13 and, after attending public school in New York, received life-changing scholarship support that enabled her to attend college at Tufts University.

Diefenderfer is passionate about teaching the next generation of young people to freely help other people regardless of their means, and to develop a level of comfort about talking openly about giving and receiving help. “To me, it’s all circular. It has a huge ripple effect. Many years from now, I hope this experience will shape her psyche around giving.”

“So many of us have grown from cultures that say it’s a weakness if you have to ask for help,” says Diefenderfer. “Meritocracy alone is not enough. You have to be more than just good—you have to have luck and other people who help you along the way.” ●

■ My internship at Mitsubishi has been an incredible journey so far. I have been exposed to a wide range of design projects and have had the privilege of working alongside talented professionals in the UX/UI industry. The hands-on experience and mentorship I have received are truly shaping my career aspirations and fueling my passion for design, while also exposing me to a new culture and a different way of living.

I am truly grateful for the opportunity to intern at Mitsubishi’s Integrated Design Center in Japan, and for the generous gift from Ms. Diefenderfer that made it possible for me to participate in this invaluable experience.

As a first-generation college student with limited financial resources, I would not have been able to afford the flight to Japan on my own. This gift not only opened doors for me but also empowered me to pursue my career aspirations in design and gain an international experience that would have otherwise been unattainable. ■■

The Sky's the Limit

Olin students tackle NASA-funded project to examine solar eclipses through high-altitude balloons.

→ This fall, a group of Olin students participating in the Nationwide Eclipse Ballooning Project (NEBP) will launch high-altitude balloons into the stratosphere during the first of two upcoming solar eclipses.

Funded by NASA, NEBP supports university teams from across the country to collect data for engineering and atmospheric science objectives. The project's goal is to broaden participation of STEM learners by immersing teams in an innovative, NASA-mission-like adventure.

"When solar eclipses occur, often the shadow does not pass over easy-to-access areas in the continental U.S.," says Christopher Lee, professor of mechanical engineering and the Olin team's faculty sponsor. "In order to take advantage of the optimal conditions coming this fall and next spring, NEBP is sponsoring teams to launch weather balloons inflated by helium to about 80,000-90,000 feet so they can video stream the eclipse and collect atmospheric data."

Olin students Karina Lamoreux '25, Miranda Pietraski '25, Omar Salih '25 and Jacob Smilg '24 began working on NEBP last winter and have spent the summer combining their expertise in everything from mechanical design to firmware programming.

NEBP supplied each team with about $10,000 worth of equipment, such as sensors to measure data like temperature and barometric pressure, as well as electronic hardware so students can track their balloons in flight in real time using GPS.

Once the balloons are in flight, the students will be able to see their GPS location, some atmospheric data, and a video feed in real time. They will also be able to use the Iridium satellite constellation to control the balloons' helium vents, as well as an emergency flight termination element.

The Olin team has been working full time on their NEBP balloons over the summer in preparation for the culmination of the entire project. Lee and the students—along with other university teams—will travel to Junction, Texas, in October and again in April to launch their balloons during an annular and total solar eclipse, respectively.

"After we launch on October 14, the balloon will eventually burst due to atmospheric pressure," says Pietraski. "We'll use the Iridium system to trigger the payload to disconnect, and a parachute will allow everything to float back down to the ground. Using GPS, we'll track the balloon's location, go and retrieve it, and start examining and sharing the data with NEBP."

The team is excited to share their experience with their fellow Olin students in any way they can; for starters, NASA sent 2,000 pairs of eclipse glasses so that the whole community can enjoy the solar events safely.

"I've done internships in the past, and I wanted to take on a research opportunity because they're very different, yet they're also two sides of the same coin," says Salih. "This is going to be very gratifying because we'll be on board from design through launch—getting to see a project through from start to finish is very exciting, especially when we're collecting real and useful data that can help answer researchers' questions." ●

SCOPE SPONSOR

Pfizer

Pfizer is one of the world's leading biopharmaceutical companies and has sponsored four consecutive Olin SCOPE (Senior Capstone Program in Engineering) projects since 2019.

→ SCOPE is the culmination of students' Olin experience. In it, students put into practice everything they learned at Olin about problem solving, technical and design skills, collaboration and team building. SCOPE teams work together for a full academic year to address a real-world industry challenge.

This year, four Olin seniors— Caitlin Coffey, Sam Coleman, Jonas Kazlauskas, and Hazel Smith—worked with Olin advisor and professor of computer and cognitive science Lynn Andrea Stein, as well as a number of Pfizer liaisons, to learn more about a common challenge in clinical trial operations, brainstorm potential innovative solutions, and present a proof-of-concept model to Pfizer leaders.

“Through SCOPE, our students have the opportunity to work on real-world projects with potentially tangible consequences and measurable impact,” said Stein.

In 2022-2023, 13 sponsors supported a wide range of Olin SCOPE projects. To learn more about becoming a SCOPE sponsor, contact Ruth Levine, director of strategic industry partnerships at ruth.levine@olin.edu.

“This year’s team learned, stretched, and grew through their work, infusing their proposed solution to Pfizer’s concrete technical challenge with ‘Olinesque’ appreciation for ethical obligations and compassion for the people involved.” ●

PLC VOLUNTEER

Tim Commers P'23— Volunteer, Olin Parent Leadership Council (PLC)

“Hello, I’m an Olin parent volunteer.”

→ Visit page 21 for more information about the PLC.

These are the first words parents heard when picking up a phone call from Tim Commers P’23, the outgoing chair of Olin’s PLC. After four years as a PLC member, Commers reflects on his time volunteering with Olin’s longest-standing volunteer group.

On building the Parent Caller program:

“We on the PLC try to make families feel welcome and to build the Olin community. During my time, I tried to be a cheerleader and organizer. When I tell friends that every new Olin family gets a phone call from a current parent in August before school starts, people can’t believe that. I believe that helps set the tone for the next four years. Parents want to know what their student will experience and feel in those first days, and I feel good about how the PLC caller program helped them feel comfortable letting go of their students.”

Advice for future PLC members:

“Listen to parents. Give new parents comfort. Olin draws risk-takers. Your student is going to get a great education. Make parents feel comfortable.” ●

On discovering Olin:

“Anna (Commers ’23) had a college counselor who described getting into Olin as ‘winning the lottery.’ And she won the lottery! From our first family visit, we knew this was a unique place. If Anna could get in, this is where she would go.”

On joining the PLC:

“Anna was having such a good time, I thought joining the PLC would be a fun experience. I like to be involved and give back. And I figured that fun, interesting students were created by fun, interesting parents. That has proven to be true—Olin parents are smart, dedicated, unique people.”

GIVING DAYS

Expanding On-campus Philanthropy

In 2022-2023, Olin held two exciting giving days to energize our donor base and continue to create a culture of philanthropy on campus. On November 29, 2022, the College participated in Giving Tuesday, the nationwide day of philanthropy. On May 4, 2023, Olin held a Star Wars-themed giving day: May the Fourth Be With You.

2 giving days in 2022-2023 raised

$185,094 from

491 donors, including

36 donors who made their first gift to Olin on a giving day

→ Giving Tuesday

54 Volunteers (4 students, 5 faculty, 21 staff, 15 parents, 9 alumni) reached out to 391 parents and 494 alumni (885 total contacts), and 11 students wrote 160 thank-you postcards.

→ May the Fourth Be With You

22 Volunteers (11 staff, 1 student, 4 alumni, 7 parents) reached out to 496 alumni and 197 parents, and wrote 61 thank-you postcards.

OLIN FUND GIVING

Tommy '06 and Katy Cecil

→ Tommy Cecil '06 and his wife, Katy, are parents to 14-month-old twins and in the thick of the juggle that comes with nurturing successful careers in law and medicine while taking care of young ones at home.

However, there are some deep-rooted habits that fewer hours of sleep haven’t been able to shake, including making an annual gift to Olin.

“Each year Katy and I sit down and decide what our philanthropic priorities are going to be,” says Tommy, who is a longtime Olin donor. “We have adopted Olin as one of our primary philanthropic interests—it’s nice to have that as part of our identity.”

By now, giving back to Olin is a “reflexive habit,” says Tommy. “We believe in the college and want it to do well.” ●

CORPORATE GIVING

The Olin MIRROR / MathWorks

MathWorks, the leading developer of mathematical computing software for engineers and scientists, has redirected seed funding toward the Olin MIRROR (Movement to Invest in Reciprocity & Re-imagine Outreach Relationships).

→ This is a space in Kendall Square, Cambridge, that will develop STEM engagement opportunities and community partnerships for underserved local youth under the leadership of Amon Millner, senior advisor to the president for community strategic initiatives and associate professor of computing and innovation.

Funding from MathWorks will enable a series of activities and events at the MIRROR. One recent example was a dynamic public preview of a STEM Slam in April that featured 10 performers and engaged 90 audience members of all ages.

MathWorks STEM Outreach Engineer Wynter J. Duncanson, who shared her own STEM story, said, “I enjoyed sharing the stage at the STEM Slam with so many talented storytellers, and I look forward to developing new ways to influence programs that cultivate the kind of creativity that fuels places like MathWorks.”

“At MathWorks, we believe diverse perspectives are critical to engineering and science innovation. They help us challenge the status quo and arrive at better solutions. The MIRROR is a bold, multifaceted effort to cultivate connectivity and innovation within this community, and we are pleased to collaborate with Olin on this important initiative,” commented P.J. Boardman, Director of STEM Outreach and Workforce Development, MathWorks. ●
